Poetry Will Have To Do
Adam RW

Poetry Will Have To Do is Adam RW's debut collection: an assortment of short stories and poems inspired by finding the absurd in the mundane. In its pages you will find tales of anxious pints of milk, succinctly enthusiastic greetings cards, passive aggressive personal space battles on public transport and much more. With illustrations by Chloe Murr.

Carnival at the End of the World
Various

In this short story collection, people metamorphose into birds, vows of silence become clown eras, hallucinogenic visions are plentiful, language and form disintegrates and evolves, drugs unlock psychogeography, sex and gender fluctuate and threaten to explode, bodies open and close, toilet queues stretch on for infinity, and streams of consciousness are polluted. In our contemporary moment of poly-apocalyptic anxiety, can we find a rugged sense of optimism? Or perhaps it is already too late, with nothing left for us to do but dance into the flaming rubble.

Writing by Olly Barrett, David Dobson, Jack Houston, Nick Maynard, Alice Musgrove, Luke Reilly, Maria Robinson, Lily Steve, James Tilden, Harper Walton, Alfie White.
